customized firmware, and boot discs may be used to circumvent copyright protection. Some companies are licensed to create the means to alter the way a consumer interacts with a device, video game, or other product. eBay does not enforce licenses or restrictions imposed by companies on third parties or licensees, and cannot reasonably maintain a list of unauthorized devices or unlicensed companies. Companies that are not authorized to produce mod chips, customized firmware, or boot discs should be reported through the VeRO program, and items clearly designed to circumvent copyright protections may be reported by members and removed under encouraging infringement. </h2></h2>GUIDE.DETAILED_INFORMATION

Encouraging mod chips infringement Members aren't allowed to enable, encourage, or instruct others to use mod chips, video game converters, customized firmware (CFW), or boot discs on eBay. Items reported by members that are clearly engaging in this behavior may be removed under encouraging infringement.
