

Changing the address on your eBay account

Your primary shipping address is the default we'll provide to sellers when you buy an item. However, you can always select a different address, or add a new one, during checkout.

Your primary shipping address is the default address we provide to sellers when you purchase an item. You can always add another address during checkout.

You can find all the addresses you use on eBay, including your registration address and primary shipping address, in the Addresses - opens in new window or tab section of My eBay. It's a good idea to regularly review your addresses and update any that you no longer use. You can also add or update your address from the checkout page.

Changing your shipping address at checkout

Before you complete your purchase, always check your address details. If you need to change your shipping address at checkout, select Change in the Ship to section. You can then choose from any of the addresses saved to your account or add a new address.

To add a new address:

- Select Add a new address.
- Enter your new address.

If you'd like to make this address your primary delivery address, select Save as primary address.

- Select Add.

To update an existing address:

- Select Edit next to the address.
- Update your details.
- Select Save at the bottom of the page.

Whenever you enter a new address at checkout, we'll save it so you won't have to enter those details again in the future.

Updating your shipping address in My eBay

You can also review, add, or update your addresses at any time in My eBay:
