Using shipping rate tables

<h2>Shipping rate tables allow you to set your shipping options by domestic or international region.

</h2>

<h2><h3>Create shipping rate tables to set your shipping options and costs by region. On listings where you've applied a rate table, buyers see the shipping cost for their address, as well as more accurate delivery estimates.</h3>

</h2>

<h2>Are you looking to set flat rates or use calculated shipping? Read our article on setting up your shipping optionsOn listings where you've applied a shipping rate table, buyers will automatically see the shipping cost for their region or shipping address (e.g. a buyer from New York would see a different rate compared to a buyer from Alaska), as well as more accurate delivery estimates.<h2 id="section1">Setting up shipping rate tables</h2>You can create up to 60 unique rate tables to specify shipping options and costs for up to 5 regions in the U.S., as well as international regions.When you create a rate table, you can choose how you'd like to set your shipping costs:
By item – You'll specify different costs and shipping options for different locations
This option works well for parcels with the same or similar sizes and weights
By weight – You'll specify a fixed base cost + additional amount per lb
This option works well for heavy and bulky items that are more expensive to ship
By surcharge – You'll specify a base cost and add a surcharge by region
Many sellers select this option for remote areas that can be more expensive to ship to
This option is only available for domestic rate

Create shipping rate table - opens in new window or tabYou can also create shipping rate tables when listing your item, from your business policies - opens in new window or tab, or from your shipping preferences - opens in new window or tab.Here's how to set up a shipping rate table:
Choose whether you're specifying rates by item, weight, or surcharge.
Choose a name for your rate table (for example, "rate table for small items" or "Headphones").
Choose your regions and shipping service.
For each region, specify how much you want to charge buyers for that destination and service. (For example, you can offer express delivery to California for $15, but offer free shipping for standard delivery.)
To offer free shipping, enter $0 in the price field (don't leave it blank)
Select Save.
If you leave the shipping cost blank for a particular region, buyers from that location will see the standard flat rate from your shipping policy. If there are certain regions you don't want to ship to, you need to set up shipping exclusions.TipBuyers will just see shipping options and costs based on their shipping address – they won't see your rate table name or whether you set costs by item, weight, or surcharge.<h2 id="section2">Applying rate tables to your listings</h2>Depending on how you manage your listings, you can do this in different ways:Applying a rate table using the adva nced listing tool:
In the Shipping section, select Edit all options.
Under Shipping cost type, select Flat shipping.
Open

Domestic (or International) settings.
Select the rate table you want to use from the dropdown.
Select a default shipping option on the listing page.
Continue with creating or editing your listing. Applying a rate table using business policies - opens in new window or tab:
Select the shipping policy to which you want to apply a rate table.
Make sure that Domestic shipping (or International shipping) is set to Flat.
Under Shipping rate tables, check the box Apply domestic shipping rate table (and/or Apply international shipping rate table).
Select the rate table you want to use from the dropdown.
Select Save. Your rate table will be applied to this shipping policy and all listings which use it. Applying a rate table using the API:Once you have created your rate table(s), please contact your integration partner to connect them to sync with the eBay API. TipYou can only apply a rate table if the listing has "Flat" shipping selected (not Calculated or Local pickup).<h2 id="section3">Updating shipping rate tables</h2>You can rename a table, add or remove regions and update the shipping services and costs. However, you can't change the rate table type (for example, from an item-based rate table to a weight-based one) – you need to create a new table instead.Once you save your changes, the updated rates will be displayed on any listings which have that rate table applied.Edit shipping rate tables - opens in new window or tabYou can also edit rate tables when creating or editing your listing, from your business policies - opens in new window or tab, or from your shipping preferences - opens in new window or tab.<h3>Deleting rate tables</h3>We're working on making it possible for sellers to delete rate tables. Where possible, we recommend editing your rate tables rather than creating new ones.If you have reached your limit of 60 rate tables and need to delete some old ones, please contact us for assistance.</h2> <h2>shipping rates,rate tables,set shipping costs,granular shipping costs,shipping cost by region,shipping by weight,shipping locations</h2>
